REPORT.

After the discomfort and confusion which prevailed throughout the whole of the establishment during the three previous years, the past has been one of comparative quiet and order, and little has occurred to interfere with the ordinary routine character of institutions of this description.

The admissions during the year are found to have been 166, and adding to these 349 remaining in the Asylum on the 31st of December, 1851, a total of 515 patients have been under treatment during the year. Of these, 72 have been discharged recovered, 12 relieved or incurable, and 31 have died; leaving 400 patients in the house on the 31st December, 1852.

The average number of patients resident throughout the year was 375.

From the large number of old chronic cases admitted in the year 1851, it was fairly presumed that this class had been nearly exhausted, and that the number of admissions would fall to an ordinary average, and chiefly be composed of recent cases, and that thus the resources of the Asylum as a curative establishment would be called forth. The admissions, however, during the past year, unfortunately present nearly the same features adverted to in the last report, 87 having been insane for periods not exceeding six months, and therefore coming under the class of recent cases, while 37 had been affected from six months to two years, and 42 upwards of two years.

Upon a careful analysis of the 166 cases admitted in 1852, 65 are found to have been in a hopeless and incurable state, either from the length of time they had been insane, or from the mental disorder being associated with evident organic disease, having a known fatal tendency. As in former years, the bodily condition of the patients admitted was most unsatisfactory, and, if not labouring under active disease, many of them were in so exhausted and debilitated a state, as to leave little hope of any favourable termination; and though, by great care, liberal diet, and the use of stimulants, the lives of many have been prolonged, it is probably only to swell the mortality for the present year.

The only other points which seem more particularly to require comment in reference to the patients admitted during the year, are the large proportion supposed to have had a suicidal disposition, and the increased number in whom the disorder is attributed to intemperance.

The suicidal disposition was stated to exist in no less than 52 patients, many of whom had made one or more attempts at self-destruction previous to admission. It is a subject of much thankfulness that no accident has occurred with this most anxious class of patients, nor has any serious attempt been repeated during the past year.

In seasons of scarcity and privation, and amongst a class of society who can offer no moral resistance to depressing causes of any kind, the impulse which leads them to seek what they suppose to be a lesser evil than the precarious existence they have to endure, is readily accounted for; but the increase of this propensity in times of acknowledged prosperity and plenty, naturally compels us to look for other causes; and whether these may be referable to any atmospheric influence producing that peculiar depression of the nervous energies which leads to suicide, or to the habits of the people themselves, can only be decided by the general observation and experience of those connected with similar institutions. The coincidence, however, of so large a proportion of cases attributed to intemperance, being at the rate of 22.28 per cent., would rather tend to connect the two in the relation of cause and effect.

That intemperance is a much more frequent exciting cause of insanity than is shown in the ordinary returns of Asylums, or, in fact, than is generally known or suspected, is much to be feared. The wish to conceal this habit, so naturally felt by all classes, and amongst the lower orders especially, the difficulty of ascertaining their estimate of intemperance, and fixing upon the standard of sobriety, are almost insuperable obstacles to obtaining any correct statistics on the subject. The acknowledged extent, however, of intemperance as an exciting cause of insanity generally, independent of any speculative views on this point, even though closely approaching to facts, would alone seem to afford a strong reason for the necessity of legislative interference in restricting the temptations and facilities at present offered to the lower classes in this country of indulging in this vice.

The recoveries during the year 1852 amounted to 72, being at the rate of 43.37 per cent. upon the admissions; showing a favourable comparison with that of the previous year, (25.69,) but yet rather under the average for the last ten years. The recoveries of private patients, taken apart from the paupers, is at the rate of nearly 46 per cent. Assuming that of the 166 cases admitted, 101 might be considered as offering some chances of cure, remote though in many instances they be, 47 of these are found to have been discharged recovered during the year, being at the rate of 46.53 per cent. Of these, 41 were stated to have been insane for various periods not exceeding six months, and the remaining 6 from six to twelve months. The average duration of treatment of these patients was eleven weeks and five days.

In the early part of the year, small-pox, which was extensively prevalent and very fatal in the town of Stafford, made its appearance in the Asylum. The first case which occurred was a most severe example of the confluent form, and proved fatal. Although every precaution was taken to prevent the spread of the disease as soon as its nature was ascertained, nine male patients were attacked and one of the attendants, while only two females had the disease, and in a very mild form. At first, the way in which it was introduced into the house was unknown, but subsequently, there was reason to believe that one of the attendants had been affected with it, though in so slight and modified a form that he followed his employment, and at the time did not suspect the nature of the disease. The greater part of the male patients were re-vaccinated, but the spread of the disease seemed to be chiefly arrested by immediately separating the most trifling cases of sickness from the other inmates, and removing those which proved to be small-pox into one of the wards which had been emptied for this purpose. The free ventilation of the whole building was at the same time attended to, and the patients kept as much as possible out of doors.

The mortality during the year 1852 has been lower than that of the preceding year, being 8.26 per cent. on the mean number resident, and 6.1 on the total number under treatment; that of private patients, taken apart from the paupers, being 1.88 per cent. on the number resident, and 1.35 on the total number under treatment.

Some of the galleries on the male side of the house have been at times rather crowded, and occasionally a difficulty has been felt in providing for the male patients which have been admitted, but still no pauper patient has been refused admission, although it has been necessary to discontinue receiving the lower class of private patients. This inconvenience, however, will only be temporary, as there will be ample accommodation for paupers upon the removal of the private patients to the new Institution. This is expected to be finished in the summer; but whether the building will be sufficiently dry to occupy with safety, cannot yet be determined. Its present progress is quite satisfactory, and little now remains to be done with the exception of plastering and flooring a portion of the building, and the internal fittings. The laying out of the grounds is being proceeded with, and the chapel will shortly be commenced.

Daily experience only tends to confirm the wisdom of the separation of the two establishments, and the great importance of the scheme now being carried out, which meets with the unqualified approbation of those practically acquainted with the subject.

The funds for the completion of the Institution unfortunately still fall short, the amount required for building the chapel and furnishing being yet deficient. If it can be opened without debt, there is no reason to doubt its ultimate success; but if the funds are to be applied to paying off a debt, the charitable working of the Asylum must be impeded, and probably for many years.

I can do no greater service to the cause of humanity than by urging the importance of a general provision being made for the indigent but educated portion of the community in institutions of this description, and also pressing the wealthy, and, indeed, all classes, in this district to unite in making the undertaking now embarked in an example in every way worthy of imitation.

REPORT OF THE COMMISSIONERS IN LUNACY.

" 2nd October, 1852.

- "We have visited this Asylum, and inspected every part of it.
- "We have also seen all the patients, viz., 33 males and 24 females, who are private patients; and 176 males and 162 females, who are paupers; in all, 395.
- "The greatest order and decorum prevailed throughout, and we found no one in seclusion.
- "The patients were clean and neat in their persons and dress. A large proportion of the males are employed, as usual, in the gardens, &c., and at present about thirty of them are regularly engaged in assisting the workmen at the new Asylum.
- "Tailors, shoemakers, &c., are induced to occupy themselves at their trades, and, with the assistance of the females, all the clothes and shoes necessary for the use of the Asylum are made and repaired in the establishment.
- "The whole of the wards were remarkably clean and well ventilated, and the establishment, as usual, in excellent order.
- "Since the last visit of the Commissioners, in September, 1851, 183 patients have been admitted, 79 have been discharged, and 31 have died from various causes.
- "Small-pox prevailed in the house during the month of February, and about ten patients were attacked, but the disease only proved fatal in one case.
- "The Asylum and its inmates continue to show the marks of careful and judicious management, and its present condition is quite satisfactory.

(Signed)
